Old Battlefields Lost in Mine Blast

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, June 12.—I have returned from visiting a section of the battlefield about St. Eloi, of the battlefield about St. Eloi, where bitter fighting went on a year ago around a series of mine craters. I sought those five craters to-day and could find only two of them. The three others vanished in the mine explosion in the third battle of Ypres on Thursday.

The crater at Wytschaete is about 70 feet deep and 300 feet across, the one at St. Eloi seems hardly as hig, perhaps 60 feet hardly as big, perhaps 60 feet deep and 270 feet across. The two mine craters which remain are so small beside this huge pit that they look almost like shell

I believe this is fairly typical of what has taken place in this war in the last twelve months, whether in mine craters, in artillery fire, in air attack. The same old standards no longer apply.

Italy Backs Wilson's Message to Russia; Restitution Held Not to Be Annexation

ROME, June 12.-A semi-official communication given out here today says in commenting on President Wilson's note to Russia that the return of Alsace-Lorraine to France, Trent, Trieste, Istria and Dalmatia to Italy, Transylvania to Rumania and Bosnia and Herzegovina to Serbia would not have the character of annexation, but rather of restitution of territory.
"President Wilson's message to Russia is a lucid, sympathetic and energetic document," says the communication. "American good sense has gone directly to the heart of the enemy's treachery. The aims for which the United States entered the war, as stated by President Wilson, agree perfectly with those of the Allies. President Wilson were end supports them explains, confirms and supports them.

"The interpretation which President Wilson gives to the principle of no annexation corresponds in spirit with the thesis maintained by the Allies. The return of Alsace-Lorraine to France, Trent, Trieste. Istria and Dalmatia to Italy, Transylvania to Rumania and Bosnia and Herzegovina to Serbia do not have the character of annexation, but of restitution of territory.

"An equally excellent effect is produced by President Wilson's distinction between the national principle and the colonial principle, which means condemnation of Turkey and recognition of the right of civilized countries to colonize to insure liberty for Africa and Asia.

"Finally the phrase stating that the day has come to conquer or submit is considered an admonishment to Russia, which, it is hoped, will understand its terrible meaning.'
